

JENNY SWOISH

Vocalist

Jenny Swoish is a vocalist and songwriter with a lifelong passion for performing. A native of Southern California, she began studying piano, theater, voice and dance at a young age.

After singing “stage” versions of works by George Gershwin, Cole Porter and Irving Berlin, her interest in jazz blossomed through the classics of the Great American Songbook. She was inspired when exploring different interpretations by the likes of Ella Fitzgerald, Frank Sinatra, Sara Vaughn and Dinah Washington along with modern vocalists such as Jane Monheit and Peter Eldridge.

Jenny earned her bachelor’s degree in vocal performance from California State University, Long Beach. She studied with critically acclaimed vocalist and educator Christine Guter as well as performed in multiple award-winning ensembles.

Because of her passion for the sound, texture and energy of big band music, Jenny loves singing with the Glenn Miller Orchestra. Moreover, she delights in the chance to see and experience so much of the world while on tour. But what gives Jenny the most joy is bringing the nostalgic sound of Glenn Miller to the thousands of fans who express their thanks and happiness at hearing the songs that evoke such pleasant memories.

When not singing with the Glenn Miller Orchestra, Jenny performs her original music and works as a voice over artist in Nashville. She is excited about the upcoming spring 2023 release of her latest album of classic and original jazz music, “Tonight...in Dreamland.”
